It's not often that a community college is mentioned in the same breath as an Ivy League campus, nor is a two-year college seen as a training ground for jobs in the so-called creative economy, but in innovative cities across the country, these institutions are partnering with mayors and employers, overhauling their approach and changing the workforce development game. Come learn more about the third education revolution that is driving the job-training programs of the future.

Boston's Fifth Quarter of Learning Initiative - Site Visit

2:45 p.m. - 4:30 p.m.

A wide body of research shows that students lose knowledge and skills over the summer months. This "summer slide" has a disproportionate, cumulative effect on low-income youth, resulting in opportunity and achievement gaps. Last summer, Boston became a national leader with an innovative '5th Quarter' approach that inspires real-world learning in the summer months. This groundbreaking effort, backed in solid research and with many of Boston's greatest partners on board, is reversing this trend. Come tour a Boston "Fifth Quarter of Learning" site to learn more about this novel approach which blends rigorous academic learning with hands-on enrichment to engage the young people who need the most help and assist them in developing the skills they need to succeed in college, career and life.

24-hour Mayor? Making the Evening Safe and Vibrant

11:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m.

Cities large and small work around the clock serving citizens and visitors alike. As a mayor, you have to keep streets safe 24-7 and also provide a backdrop for vibrant neighborhoods and special events. Smart city technologies can serve you to enhance the management of city infrastructure around the clock so it better facilitates these outcomes. Panelists will describe how they're enhancing pedestrian safety in crosswalks after dark when there is a disproportionate accident rate. Panelists will talk about how they're investing in the public realm and citizen engagement apps to engender vibrant commercial districts with positive street life. Panelists will consider how new technologies can serve both to provide policy input, remediation and then monitoring the success of different strategies.

Hear from the World Economic Forum on the impact of the fourth industrial revolution on cities, tour nuTonomy's autonomous vehicle garage, understand the impact of this technology on an aging population and discuss the critical role of cities in shaping the future of mobility.

This session will include a mix of presentation, discussion, and a tour of nuTonomy's garage.

Presenters:

John Moavenzadeh, World Economic Forum

Karl Iagnemma, CEO and Co-Founder nuTonomy

Chris Osgood, Chief of Streets, City of Boston

Housing Affordability: Boston's Efforts to Design, Develop & Fund Differently

2:30 p.m. - 4:30 p.m.

Workshop will be held at the Marriott Hotel

Hosted by the City of Boston Housing iLab

Making Boston an affordable place to live for all incomes is a priority for the Walsh Administration. Mayor Walsh has invested in a number of programs designed to stabilize neighborhoods, preserve existing deed-restricted affordable housing, and create more affordable market-rate housing opportunities for households at all income levels. The Mayor's Housing Innovation Lab is a leading part of this effort. The Housing Innovation Lab tests ways to design, develop and fund housing differently in Boston. Come learn about the Mayor's Housing Innovation Lab's collaborative and people-centered approach and discover the real solutions it has championed. During this program, you will hear directly from a panel of Innovation Lab partners inside and outside City Hall and participate in a workshop designed to help you use this approach in your city.

(60 min) Panel of partners: Hear Housing iLab collaborators from the City talk about their experience piloting and scaling housing solutions with the iLab. Speakers will address challenges and opportunities of this approach. Topics will include Accessory Dwelling Units, Housing with Public Assets, Compact Living, and Inter-generational Homeshare.

(60 min) Workshop: You will work in small groups to identify how your City can design, fund and develop differently in order to make housing more affordable. You will brainstorm ways to explore these ideas with residents and partners and develop experiments to test these ideas.

Operation Exit: Second Chances Through Apprenticeships & More

2:30 p.m. - 4:30 p.m.

Workshop held at the Boston Public Library

(5 minute walk from the Marriott Hotel)

Operation Exit ("OE") is a flagship initiative introduced by Mayor Walsh and designed as an intensive training program to prepare participants for entry into an apprenticeship in the building trades.

"OE" specifically and intentionally targets and receives referrals of those identified by law enforcement, City of Boston streetworkers and our web of social service providers of the most active and engaged in driving the violence in our neighborhoods. Through Career Readiness and Occupational Skills Training, encompassing classroom, peer to peer mentorship and hands-on learning experiences, Operation Exit provides the knowledge and skills required for participants upon successful graduation to receive guaranteed placement into a state-registered Building Trades apprenticeship program. Over three-quarters of participants are currently placed in full-time employment at the conclusion of the program and after two years, 98% remain crime-free.
