Mayors Game Changer: Transforming Cities in Sports and Entertainment

3:30 p.m. - 4:30 p.m.
Liberty Salon I-J-K, Level M4

Over 30 new professional sports leagues have recently been formed and are looking for cities to play in. Ranging from women's baseball and hockey to drone racing to youth sports, these leagues are looking for medium-sized communities to host teams and games. The new USCM Mayors Game Changer program is designed to help match these needs with mayors who want to see their communities enter the lucrative sports and entertainment worlds. The Mayors Game Changer program will bring mayors together with the best sports business minds to develop a game-winning strategy for their cities. Oklahoma City is a good example of a city that developed such a winning strategy, especially in becoming the nation's center for rowing. Sign up and find out how your city can become a sports and entertainment game changer!

Energy Certainty in American Cities

11:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m.
Independence Salon D, Level M4

Cities are facing a growing energy crisis characterized by rising costs, an aging grid, and surging electricity demand driven by new technologies like AI data centers. Federal agencies (like FERC) and the current Administration are pushing for rapid integration of AI and data centers, which puts additional strain on existing infrastructure. Rather than relying solely on external providers, Mayors and city leaders should consider public investment in a diverse mix of energy sources to achieve "energy certainty," and ensure that essential public services remain powered and affordable.
